To win, Pacman should avoid phone booth duel

By Norah Trinidad

ALL THINGS BEING UNEQUAL, ALL THAT Manny Pacquiao may have to do to secure victory in Las Vegas on Sunday is avoid being dragged and trapped in a telephone booth slug-out with David Diaz.

With his tremendous edge in firepower, Pacquiao could easily sustain a slugging injury and prevail.

But, at the same time, he should not yield to pressure and avoid being caught in a too-close, dangerous-like battle with the reigning World Boxing Council lightweight champion, who is the underdog underdog.

The traditional pro-fight odds stick to Pacquiao's edge in practically all departments.

Oil hikes past $140/bbl; local prices breach P60 for 1st time

NEW YORK—OIL PRICES SURGED nearly 4 percent to a record above $140 a barrel on Thursday after OPEC said it was studying possible options to cut output in response to potential United States action against producer countries.

US crude ended up $5.08 at $139.64 a barrel, after hitting an all-time high of $140.39 earlier, eclipsing the previous record of $139.89 a barrel hit on June 26.

Toxic cargo stops search

SIBUYAN SEA—THE discovery that the MV Princess of the Stars was carrying the toxic pesticide endosulfan when it set sail has prompted the Philippine Coast Guard (PCG) to suspend search, rescue and retrieval operations in the area where it sank on June 21 at the height of Typhoon "Frank."

The local government of Iloilo Fernando, the coastal town closest to the site, yesterday ordered some 20,000 residents not to drive, swim or fish, effectively cutting into their primary source of livelihood.

"This is just a precautionary measure," Mayor Marissa Tawag told her constituents on

US aircraft carrier 'stays at edge' of RP waters

By Juliet Labog-Jarallana

NEW YORK (VIA PLDT)—ARMED critics from Filipino militants, the nuclear-powered aircraft carrier USS Ronald Reagan will keep out of Philippine territory and merely stay "at the edge" of its waters, President Macapagal-Arroyo said here.

TERRA/IN

"Signs they may keep using sophisticated weapons, they made it impossible for any aircraft carrier, they have now presence in Philippine. But to maintain security, we will not go to the edge of territorial waters of Philippines," Macapagal said.

But there are those who are criticizing it. Supposedly the aircraft carrier is carrying nuclear weapons so it is feared from going to the Philippines. To avoid controversies, it will just stay at the edge of the territorial waters of the Philippines.

Sulpicio pins blame on weather bureau

By Alfrico W. Lopez
and Jerome Anig

SULPICIO LINES HAS BLAMED the weather bureau for its allegedly inaccurate reports on the movements of Typhoon "Frank" which it said caused the sinking of the company's Princess of the Stars.

The company said it was consulting using the Philippine Atmospheric, Geophysical and Astronomical Services Administration (PAGASA), the country's weather forecast, for precise navigational.

Survivor returns to Sibuayan for lost love

By Terra Quimando

SAN FERNANDO, SIBUYAN Island—The search for his missing girlfriend has brought survivor Jesse Dela Cruz back to where he almost lost his life.

Delacruz, one of the 57 survivors of the capsized MV Princess of the Stars, was able to board a life raft that was washed ashore in Malabon, Quezon, on Sunday.

Malabon is some 90 kilometers away from the site of the disaster.

He returned to Sibuayan to get news on Thursday, hoping to get some about his pregnant girlfriend, 22-year-old Roselyne Ligon.

The couple had boarded the MV Princess of the Stars in Manila for Cebu last Friday to

GMA settles for 30-minute phone call with busy Obama

By Juliet Labog-Jarallana

NEW YORK CITY (VIA PLDT)—He couldn't meet with her in person but a 30-minute phone call from US Sen. Barack Obama was enough to put a very busy President Macapagal-Arroyo in good spirits.

"He called as the President at 2:15 pm Thursday (Friday at Manila). They talked for 30 minutes," said Ambassador Mariano Pajares Jr., central general to Sen. Francisco and concurrent presidential adviser on foreign visits.

"The President was in very high spirits after the call." Press Secretary Jean Duroso said in a letter for reporters covering Macapagal's 10-day US trip.

Aside from meeting with US President George W. Bush, she planned to meet with Obama, Democratic presidential candidate, and his Republican rival, Sen. John McCain.

While her meeting with Bush took place on Tuesday without a hitch, meeting the two rival candidates proved to be difficult, particularly Obama. After several changes in date and venue, the meeting with Obama was supposed to take place on Thursday evening in Washington, DC. This would have required Macapagal to fly from New York to the US capital on Thursday evening, then come back to finish her hectic schedule in New York on Friday. She will then fly again to Washington, DC

Prosecutors told to ask SC for revival of old Erap case

By Joseph A. Uy

THE SANDAGANAN yesterday urged government prosecutors to go to the Supreme Court for clarification concerning their bid to require an old property case against convicted plunderer former President Joseph Estrada.

Presiding Justice Orlando Pineda, who chairs the Special Division, told news prosecutors to file a motion with the high tribunal so the anti-graft court can be advised to whether it can hear the case.

"The position of the prosecution is correct but as to whether or not we have proven evidence was reached during the trial, we cannot go ahead because the Supreme Court already ruled it is to be seen and analyzed," said Pineda.

Earlier this week, side prosecution moved to proceed with the prosecution of Estrada Case No. 20044, in which Estrada is charged with making false claims on Jan. 4, 2001, 2002, 2003, 2004, 2005, 2006, House to review AFP's Articles of War

By Mikee Sison

THE COMMITTEE ON HUMAN RIGHTS of the House of Representatives might review the "anti-state" provisions of the Articles of War governing the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) to update them and make them more applicable to the times.

"We could propose a review of the Articles of War because it is already antiquated. Sometimes, it was passed during the Commonwealth period," said Quizon Rep. Lorenson Tabata (D, chair of the Human Rights Committee).

Tabata said that with the commission's consensus following a surprise visit last Wednesday by the committee members and constituents in Human Rights (CHRE) Chairman Lito de Lima to the six military officers detained at the AFP Command Center for their alleged involvement in the failed February 2008 general probe.

Part of hearings

The officers, former Marine Commander Maj. Gen. Renato Miranda, Marine Colonel Arnel Quinsion, Graciano de Vera, and Adjutant Generalissimo Army Sergeant Colonel Edmundo Malabanan and Major Jesus Aquino, are among the 20 military officers being tried for meeting by a military tribunal.

Tabata said the review of the Articles of War was among those the committee and De Lima discussed with the detained officers.

"Sir, Miranda had something significant to say. He said that it was really very hard to keep a professional military establishment if the leaders of the military are given too much discretion and would be too influential," Tabata said.

The visit by the committee and CHRE to check on the officers' living conditions inside their detention cell at the headquarters of the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) compound in Camp Aguinaldo was part of the committee's hearings being conducted following complaints by the officers' wives that their husbands' rights were being violated.

The group will also visit other officers detained at the three stockades in Camp Cagayan in Taney, Basil, and the Army's intelligence Service Group, and the Logistics Component in Camp Aguinaldo.

Tabata said the committee would visit Army Brig. Gen. Danilo Lita at the Camp Cagayan stockade center where he is detained with the Magellan officers led by Sen. Antonio Trillanes III to get his input on possible new laws in the Articles of War.

De Lima said the Articles of War should be "made relevant to human rights standards and human rights conventions which the Philippines is a signatory."

"Most of the provisions in the Articles of War are vague and were applicable only in times of war," De Lima said.

AFP chief of staff Gen. Romeo del Rosario said that the Articles of War were amended. "I would welcome any re-examination or study of the Articles of War so that it can address the present situation of the AFP and be responsive to the soldiers," he said.

"The AFP chief of staff, however, stressed that the present provisions in the Articles of War would be applied in the members of the AFP for as long as it is in effect."

Rep. Mena pointed President Arroyo's letter (Quizon) was among the committee members who visited the detained officers. Quizon told the Supreme he received a lot of good news, saying that the detained military officers.

Quizon said Miranda and Quinsion jokingly kept on making references to his previous visit to the detention center during their meeting that lasted nearly three hours.

Familiar conditions

"They said we familiar with that kind of living condition," Quizon claimed. Quizon was once detained at the Army's Intelligence Service Group (ISG) in 1982.

"I am familiar with the place. There is a new cell and a wall by high wall," Quizon recalled of the ISG detention compound.

Quizon was placed under military confinement for one month during the Marcos regime.

AI warns Malaysia vs expulsion of illegals

KUALA LUMPUR, MALAYSIA—AN EXTERMINAL RIGHTS GROUP WELDED MALAYSIA ON Friday to review its plan to send out tens of thousands of Filipino and Indonesian illegal immigrants and citizens it may lead to human rights violations.

Assembly International Malaysia and the organization include a large number of human rights activists and citizens who had been the conflict-ridden Malaysian region for the southern Philippines to Malaysia's eastern Sabah state on Borneo island.

In addition, many are overseas people and migrants who had lived in Sabah for more than a decade, including children who were born living illegally.

"We fear that the systematic and arbitrary action of mass expulsions by the federal government is addressing such a serious and complex issue will violate the ongoing human rights and humanitarian concerns in Sabah and the region is a serious risk level," he said in a statement.

"We are of the opinion that the federal government's unilateral action may result in serious human rights violations."

Cruel treatment

Assembly chief executive and co-chairman of Assembly, prominent human rights activist and lawyer, said that the health care in detention for women, children and other vulnerable groups.

In 2007, it also reports indicated that mass deportations of undocumented migrants led to deaths of children due to dehydration and disease in Sabah's detention centers.

Assembly urged the government to study the impact law in Sabah carefully before taking any action.

Government officials were not immediately available for comment.

Deputy Prime Minister Datuk Seri Anwar Ibrahim said that the nation has will launch a massive operation to flush out and deport illegal immigrants without regard to their status in the documents from Sabah, which has also been the Philippines and Indonesia.

Authorities estimated there are more than 100,000 illegals in Sabah. But the state's politicians insist the real figure is several times that, and claim that foreigners can maintain Malaysia in some provinces.

The issue has long been a bitter grievance for Sabah politicians, who accuse the federal government of failing to halt job-seeking foreigners after their permit expires.

In its last crackdown in 2005, the government deported 300,000 illegal immigrants, mostly Indonesian, from Sabah.

Indonesian officials have expressed concern that the new operation plan could lead to a demand for workers in Sabah's timber and plantation industries, which will again encourage the influx of illegal immigrants.

A MANILA CITY TRIBUNE COURT has dismissed the charges filed by the newspaper and its publisher, Antonio Reyes, against government officials over the arrest of media owners during the takeover by rebel soldiers of the National Trade Union for Bookbinders last June.

Judge Reynaldo Tampi of Manila Regional Trial Court Branch 36 dismissed the charges against Defense Secretary Alfonso Treñas Jr., Justice Secretary Raul Gonzalez, Philippine National Police General Antonio Razon Jr., National Capital Region Police Office Director Benito Santos, among others, for alleged violation of press freedom law against Gonzalez's statement that journalists would be arrested should media involvement occur.

The decision said the statements were made in public places and not in private conversations. It also said the statements were not made in a hostile environment.

On the other hand, the court said the statements were not made in a hostile environment.

On the other hand, the court said the statements were not made in a hostile environment.

Harry Roque, the plaintiff's legal counsel, said they would appeal the case to higher court, claiming there were no grounds to dismiss the case.

"Defendants are still afraid of the fact that there was no trial on the merits of the case. It is not proper to dismiss the case because the matter of defense has to be presented in court," Roque told Inquirer last in a phone interview.

Roque maintained that Gonzalez and other government officials "approved" the arrests, although he admitted that the arrests were not planned.

He also said that the arrests were not planned.

against journalists in these cases, Roque said.

"That is not the reason for the arrests of the press is not a threatening matter, taking into account the reality of the situation of the police and the government of Manila," he said.

He also said that the arrests were not planned.

Roque said the press cannot be arrested because the police officers are not armed.

Malaya newspaper's chief correspondent, Elton Fernandez, one of the plaintiffs, alleged press freedom at the court's decision, maintaining that the public's right to know was high in the police officers.

Mindanao security now better despite kidnap—GMA

By Michael Lee Diaz

DESPITE THE RECENT ABDUCTION OF ABS-CBN anchor reporter Gus (Gus) and her crew by Abu Sayyaf bandits, the security situation in Mindanao has improved over the years, President Manuel Arroyo said Tuesday.

In an interview with CNN US affiliate (GMA) in Washington, President Arroyo said the country "has tremendous capacity to fight terrorism in the Philippines."

"In fact, that has been the message that I have received from President George W. Bush and from Secretary (Robert) Gates about how much improved the situation in Southeast Asia is, compared to many years ago when this was not so much," said Arroyo.

But the President in office said that Gus and her crew were taken into custody for their arrest, which was not a kidnapping. He said the arrest was a kidnapping.

Borlaug combined with Michael Ullac for the only "Place document shows govt's plan to neutralize Left," Lopez and Ochoaqui collaborated with John Lasing for the article "Aligaba for the article 'Reliving the Digital Gap.'" And Del Mundo had the team that also included Marguerite Ortiz, Jerry Delmonico, Duane Lucas, J. B. Gonzales and Lawrence de Sautour for the article "Inside PCSD 21 Years Later."

DA assures Panay folk of adequate food supply

By Amy B. Reyes

AGRICULTURE SECRETARY ARTHUR C. Tug has assured residents of Panay Island of adequate food supply and stable prices despite the damages wrought by typhoon Frank on the island.

Tug, who had to cut short his trip to the United States, arrived in Iloilo City on Friday for a two-day inspection trip of the island's four provinces which were hit hard by typhoon Frank.

In a statement, Tug said the National Food Authority and National Bureau of Investigation were working in tandem in Panay to check price movements and assure retailers and other businessmen engaged in procuring and other food trade practices.

"The government will notice their stocks and file charges against retailers based on any hoarding of rice from the after market of the more depleted stores within the region in recent years," Tug said.

He stressed that incidents of price spikes were not justified in the face of sufficient food supply in Iloilo and the three other Panay provinces—Capiz, Antique and Aklan.

Tug said he has already ordered the NFA to increase on rice distribution efforts to stabilize the supply and prices of the staple in the West Visayas island.

Indole problem

"The government will not hesitate to revoke the provision of Republic Act 7341 on the filing of criminal proceedings against retailers who are profiting from commodity prices and with their food products raised under temporary price controls," Tug said.

"Luzon harvest has just finished," he said, "so there are sufficient rice supplies in Panay and there is no justification for prices to move the way they have been moving."

He added that the NFA and NBI have been ordered to monitor cases on filing and seizure of stocks are confiscation against violators of the Price Act so that rice and other food supplies can be sold and distributed to the public at reasonable levels.

At the same time, the NFA has been ordered to continue distributing rice supplies at increased rates to maintain stable supplies and prices," he added.

The NFA has thus far supplied 2.43 metric tons or 48,761 bags of rice to the markets in Panay.

Before leaving the country last weekend as Joint Presidential Management Group in his 18-day working visit to the US, Tug had instructed NFA Administrator Joseph Venera to assure that from neighboring provinces and flood the city with stocks after the typhoon landmass NFA's main warehouse in the province.

Rehabilitation program

Tug said he would encourage the damage wrought by typhoon Frank to agriculture and fisheries and help working with DA field offices, local executives and other stakeholders on a rehabilitation program for Western Visayas.

The DA-Central Office Order (COM-CO) issued on June 23 that the typhoon caused heavy damage to rice fields, damaged some 6945 hectares worth of crops in the region, comprising of palay worth P177 million in 80,294 hectares, rice at P50 million in 18,775 hectares, and high value commercial crops at P100 million worth P27.2 million in 658 hectares.

SC junks Trillanes dream to attend Senate ...

HEALTH ADVISORY

FOR RESCUERS AND COMMUNITY RESIDENTS
in SAN FERNANDO, ROMBLON
(27 June 2008)

NDCC confirmed today the presence of 50 metric tons of endosulfan in the sunken H/V Princess of the Stars.

Endosulfan is a restricted pesticide for use in pineapple plantations. At toxic levels and following ingestion it can cause death or affect the central nervous system manifesting as headache, dizziness, tremors and convulsions and may also include cardiovascular symptoms. Blood from exposed individuals can be tested to detect presence of the poison. Treatment is supportive.

When released in the environment, endosulfan enters the air, water and soil. It does not dissolve easily in water. Most of the chemical in surface water is attached to soil particles floating in the water or attached to soil at the bottom. The small amounts of endosulfan that dissolve in water break down over time. Depending on the conditions in the water, endosulfan may break down within 1 day or it may take several months. Some endosulfan in surface water evaporates into air and breaks down. Animals, like fishes, that live in endosulfan-contaminated waters can build up endosulfan in their bodies. The amount of endosulfan in their bodies can be several times greater than in the surrounding water.

Presently there are no observable signs of endosulfan contamination in and around the waters of the ship such as fish kills or divers getting sick.

Despite these diving and recovery operations have been aborted. There are now efforts to assess exposures of divers and possible illness in case there was endosulfan exposure.

Fish and other marine life harvested from that area are now considered not fit for human consumption until complete tests indicate that there was no endosulfan contamination. DOH has set up disease surveillance to monitor other health effects of residents in the area.

passed by Associate Justice Conchita Carpio Morales, the high court on basic has barred Trillanes from attending Senate hearings while he has pending cases, affecting the decision of Manila City Regional Trial Court Branch 146 Judge Oscar Hernandez.

In his petition to overturn President's ruling, which was issued on July 2007, Trillanes requested his request to be allowed to attend all Senate functions, to have an office in his domestic cell at the Manila City Regional Trial Court, and to receive members of his staff in his domestic office.

He stressed that as an elected Member of the Senate, he should be allowed to exercise his legislative functions, to have an office in his domestic cell at the Manila City Regional Trial Court, and to receive members of his staff in his domestic office.

He also asked the court's permission to give interviews and statements to the media.

An admission that he has yet to be convicted of coup d'etat and rebellion charges before the civilian and military courts, Trillanes said he should enjoy civil and political rights.

He added that there were enough precedents allowing liberal treatment of detainees, citing the cases of Deputy President Joseph Estrada and Senator Antonio Trillanes before the Manila Regional Trial Court (MRTC).

Millions voted for him

Trillanes noted that he was not a flight risk, unlike ex-Sen. Ramon Lopez, who was convicted of spying a secret and tried to evade arrest.

Trillanes was prevented from diagnosing his legislative duties when he was detained despite the court's decision.

Furthermore, Trillanes, who placed 11th in the 2007 senatorial race, stressed that to deny him his request would be tantamount to disenfranchising the millions of voters who had elected him.

Trillanes is one of dozens of justice officers and cabinet personnel who took over the Manila City on July 2007 in an alleged plot against the Arroyo administration to deny the alleged coup attempt in the military and the government.

Non-bailable offense

Last year, as the Arroyo administration was embroiled in a corruption scandal, Trillanes and other justice officers pulled out of their Manila hearing and took over the Manila Regional Trial Court in Manila City, where in a standoff, they decided the case.

caption in the government.

The high court denied Trillanes' request, saying that although the Senate is not a convicted prisoner, the fact that it is not fit for a non-bailable offense makes his "rights more limited than those of the public."

Granting a past conviction, the high court said: "All prisoners whether under preventive detention or serving final sentence cannot practice their profession nor engage in any business or occupation, or hold office, elective or appointive, while in detention."

In addition, the court said Congress was not sufficient in granting the petitioner more rights than the normal prisoner. The Manila Regional Trial Court was not binding on the court.

The high court also said that Trillanes could not compare his case with those of Estrada and Lopez as his request was not for emergency leave.

Flight risk

Trillanes also proved to be a flight risk, despite his insistence that he was, the high court said. Citing the May 20, 2007 incident where Trillanes and other officers on trial went past the Manila House and headed for the court's front door to take over the court's functions.

The account, dated this time at the Manila Free Press, states that President's attorney filed the case. The suit then would require Trillanes to be neither present nor act, or to leave the court for his whereabouts because not.

The high court also denied Trillanes' request for a writ of habeas corpus, saying that to grant it would be tantamount to a judicial usurpation.

The court's decision that a public official cannot be removed for offenses committed before his term is not acceptable as the court is not an administrative tribunal, according to the decision.

It is a "misapprehension" that the people's vote is tantamount to the "corruption" set by the Constitution and jurisprudence, it said.

The President's claimed victory only signifies partially that when the voters elected him to the Senate, they did so with full awareness of the limitations on his functions of arrest and with the knowledge that he could only achieve such legislative results which he could accomplish within the confines of prison, the high court added.

US woman high ...

Background 1

from both her husband and the only person on his Black Belt made a change from the 100-year-old family to a 700-acre estate.

After more than a year of delay, the husband's dream finally began to take off in Hawaii (July in Manila) in a large helicopter project ordered with help of one of her housekeeper's wings dangling from a wire beneath it to help.

Exhausted

"When I'm not working," an exhausted husband shouted as he jumped up and down and rubbed his hands over his head, in the appearance of those three hours family members and friends.

A dream come true. A dream come true. "I'm tired," said the husband, grinding from his car to his house with the exhausted words "Wing House" told her grateful husband to be in the most empty of men of his 22 and 1-1/2 hectares of black-covered hills and low-rise houses.

Recycled junkies jet

It takes you to know to dream big. If you want to live in a house built out of a ring, and build on that once broken into two 500 people.

"There's been a big building in this house that has received going approval from 17 government agencies and clearing the way for just to transport the plane," architect David Perry said.

Although Perry and his firm, Studio of Environmental Architecture, are well-known in the industry for building "green" houses out of recycled and natural materials, this is the first house ever to be recycled from a gigantic junked aircraft where wings alone contain about 3,000 square meters.

Client crashy enough

"I really found a client crashy enough and willing enough to do it," he joked last year, just long after the old 747 jet and the husband lived in an airplane junkyard in the Mojave Desert but later on up and moved more than 140 km to Carlsbad, near San Diego. The plane sat at the Carlsbad Airport while waiting and the laying of the foundation for the house began to be completed.

The rest of the plane's parts will be recycled in the husband's property, a helicopter, costing $10,000 per hour, was the only way to get the 36-meter-long wing separate from the landing gear of the engine above the hills.

The aircraft cost about $200 million, which is more of the monthly plan, was a bargain from the junkyard at $40,000.

The completed structure will include a 370-sq-m house and several other buildings, including guest houses, a restaurant's residence and a library.

There will be an open studio made from a piece of landscape, and part of the wall will become a viewing platform where visitors can gaze longingly across the hills toward the Pacific Ocean. The rest will be a modern garden, and one of the guest houses is the first-class lounge.

The wings will provide the roof.

Environmental

The goal is to use every piece of the plane, which is in keeping with the husband's conviction, both as an environmentalist and an advocate of art.

"I love to recycle, I love green houses and contemporary architecture, and I especially love nature and the natural environment," said the husband, whose family owns the 100-year-old house in California and who laughs when asked his age.

The family and the husband say they were not so surprised when the old plane was the last building.

"I thought it was a little crazy but to live with my wife, she's quite a character," the husband's daughter, Shelly Thomas, told the husband, laughing.

"My mom's definitely a little bit of a hothead, but she's the most beautiful, the most beautiful, the most beautiful."

Next house: A ship

Industrially built, the house has a history of recent success. The area was previously owned by Tony Danzetta, a designer of sail and motorboats for film who filed for bankruptcy in 1999, and the house was sold to the husband's family.

Most of the structure was developed by a team from the mid-1990s, but several pieces and projects, constructed out of things like old barrels and steel rods, were recycled.

Rebuilding is keeping them and the large, decorative frame from the Danzetta, who died in 1999, was in place.

But if the next house, the husband's dream of what he wants to build is to make out of "I'd like to see a ship," he said.

UP to host int'l conference on Philippine studies July 23-26

AN INTERNATIONAL conference that will showcase Philippine studies and share new discoveries in a global era will be held on July 23-26 at the Philippine Social Science Center, Commonwealth Avenue, Quezon City, and at the Ramon Magsaysay University (Adobo), Loson, Del Norte, Quezon City.

About 285 papers will be presented in 72 sessions by some of the best Filipino and international scholars in the field. The International Conference on Philippine Studies (ICOPS), which is one of the major events included in the anniversary celebration of the Philippine's Centennial celebrations.

The conference, which last at its theme "Philippine Studies for the 21st Century: New Missions, Challenges, and Transformations," aims to provide a forum on developments and advances in research on the field.

Since 1989, the hotel has been held every first year of an international meeting in association with the Philippine Studies Association (PSA) in cooperation with the International Board for Philippine Studies Conference, currently based at the Center for Philippine Studies in the University of Hawaii at Manoa.

The co-conveners of the 19th hotel are PSA president Bernadine R. Chua and the Philippine Social Science Center serving as co-conveners.

It is cosponsored by the National Commission for the Development of the Arts, Culture, and Heritage, National Center for Philippine Studies at the University of the Philippines at Manila, and the Office of the Mayor of Quezon City.

16, London Brent crude ended up $13.30 at $139.82 a barrel.

The benchmark price for oil as of a surge of gasoline companies and economic news prompted a further flight in global stock markets.

World stocks fell in a three-month low on Friday after the surge in oil prices and a downgrading global credit picture, dented confidence over the outlook for corporate profits (See story in Business section.)

In the Philippines, the pump prices of gasoline launched the 2008-09 year for the first time after Philippine Shell Petroleum Corp. and Chevron Philippines last night announced they were asking up their pump prices by P1.50 per liter.

For Shell, the new price in Metro Manila is now between P98.67 and P100.57 for unleaded gasoline and between P100.98 and P104.11 for premium gasoline.

For Chevron, its 93 octo gasoline is between P98.47 and P100.62 for unleaded gasoline, and between P100.98 and P104.30 for premium.

The oil companies were expected to follow suit as had happened in the past.

The latest price adjustments marked the 10th time this year that local pump prices had increased. It was also the sixth time that oil firms had jacked up prices for gasoline and diesel by P1.50 a liter.

Fresh data showed surging energy and other raw material costs are putting upward pressure on prices in countries from Japan to France.

Litay studies out

Oil has surged 45 percent so far this year, raising costs for businesses, consumers and governments and now leading governments to start enacting policies to reduce global inflation with economic challenges.

The head of Litay's national oil company said the recovery may cut crude production because the oil market is well supplied, according to news reports.

Litay also said it was studying possible options to cut output in response to potential United States actions against producer countries.

"The crude oil market is still sharply higher in early trading after Litay's National Oil Company chief (Shah) Litay said that Litay was considering a production cut," said The House of Representatives.

Shah, Litay's most senior official, said he was studying the possibility of reducing production in response to a bill before the US Congress that would require the US Justice Department to sue members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) for limiting oil supplies.

"There are threats from the Congress and they are talking OPEC to revert, according to the acceleration of the OPEC's oil," he said.

Litay pumped about 1.7 million barrels per day of oil to the market, according to a Reuters survey out of his company's output of 31.3 million barrels.

Oil prices have risen over the past six months, supported by surging demand from emerging economies like China.

Fitting flows of cash into commodities from investors seeking to hedge against inflation and the weak dollar have added to the pressure.

Rising fuel costs have strained economies and spurred protests around the globe, prompting OPEC to consider a price hike to offset the impact of rising oil prices.

Over producer OPEC's oil will be an increase Thursday that prices could reach $179 a barrel in the coming months, and he returned the world's position that speculation, not a supply problem, was driving oil prices high.

"I believe prices probably between $150 and $170 during this summer, that will perhaps ease toward the end of the year," he said.

Protest actions

In Metro Manila, consumer and labor groups are holding anti-oil price protest action for the third straight week against the new pump price increases.

"The rate they hike oil from are going to pump prices will have already hiked 100 by the time President Macapagal Arroyo declares her terms of the Nation's oil to be fully," said Benigno M. Reyes Jr., secretary-general of the Filipino Oil Workers' Union.

"The onslaught of weekly price hikes has become unbearable. We don't know how the poor can still cope with such high prices," he said.

Reyes said more groups were planning to hold a similar protest next week.

"The economic hardship is pushing people to protest," Reyes said and added that the call is to the oil-rich nation to cut oil prices and subsidies. Reuters, AFP and Bureau of Statistics

Ilonggo folk slowly rise from the mud

By Hector Filapang
Iloilo City

THE MURKY FLOODING WATERS that overflowed can, swept away houses and turned entire villages into watery pools of death and destruction overnight have receded.

But along the streets and in villages, images that reflect the confusion of the severely stricken.

Adults deep and still cover some areas that are littered with trash and debris, fallen trees and electric poles. Several vehicles are still stuck in the middle of rice fields with bridges only half of their structure standing.

In many houses, which brown loam are washed to walls and floors, a reminder of how high the water rose and how fast the mudflow first hung in the height of the onslaught of Typhoon "Yusek."

Worst ever

Officials said the flooding in the worst ever experienced in Western Visayas, which has stricken Ilonggo folk now grappling to rebuild their lives and regain their lost sense of peace and security in the normally fish-lake communities.

"This is the first time that I have witnessed anything like this," said 75-year-old Basilio Gato, 10th Street 20.

Mayor and local officials swarmed by frantic calls for help from residents to emergency aid in areas now "flooded" by the extent and magnitude of the calamity.

"Everyone was asking for help but even someone was victims of the flood," said Jerry Rosas, executive officer of the provincial disaster coordinating council.

Mayor's wife and children themselves went to the roof of their house as the water rose quickly at dawn.

Thousands of residents fled their homes to escape the flooding waters.

Seven children and her husband Basilio, both 45, and their 11 children, age 9 to 29 years old, fled from their two-story house in Bawangan, Desamparado in Aklan District at noon on June 21 after floodwaters reached chest level. They lost all their belongings.

"The water rose so fast that we only had time to save ourselves," said Basilio.

Lucky

Their sister is among the 642 persons who have been staying at the San Catholic compound since last Saturday.

But despite living above all their belongings and abandoning their home, they consider themselves lucky.

"We are all still here. Some of us got into the flood," said Basilio.

Iloilo City and neighboring towns have received emergency supplies during heavy rains and typhoons. But Bawangan was caught by surprise by the onset of fresh floods trapped residential areas and other centers.

In June 2004, 47 families or 144 families residents of Western Visayas were affected by the calamity on June 23, according to reports of the provincial disaster coordinating council and regional disaster coordinating council.

The typhoon hit in June 2004 and 136 people, but the death toll could still increase at least 232 remains missing.

The city and province of Iloilo were the hardest hit according to the 144 dead, 233 missing and 136 injured, in June 14 of this. In City's 180 barangays were affected including subdivisions in Aklan District and the neighboring region of Iloilo.

Aklan had the second highest death toll with 51, followed by Zamboanga City, Cebu City and Negros Oriental (14).

The flooding spread to one town per residents along the coast and over to inland.

ile and upper middle class families in peak subdivisions.

Insurance photo correspondent Arnold Almagosa and his wife fled from their house in Bawangan Camaling to Aklan District around noon after floodwaters after water started entering their house.

They were preparing to transfer their belongings to the mother's house a few meters away when the water suddenly reached waist high.

Almagosa managed to save their television set and DVD player but all other things were lost including their clothes and CDs of their favorite rock as the water inside their house reached 10 feet high.

During the evacuation, he held his camera wrapped in a plastic bag. "This is my livelihood," he said.

Almagosa also managed to save their dog "Bulldog" and an "Wing 4." He went on the next day in borrowed clothes to cover the clothes and other things.

Even insurance companies were not agreed. GMA 7 had to relocate its studio and school operation center to the Bala provided capital after their station in Aklan District was flooded.

Iloilo City Mayor Jerry Treñas, who was attending a seminar in Marikina at the height of the typhoon, came home with one of his belongings, relatives and employees damaged or lost due to the flood. His wife and children had evacuated their house in Marikina District.

Crops

At least P1.3 billion worth of crops and livestock were lost during the flooding, said Lary Nolasco, regional director of the Department of Agriculture.

This includes 71,000 hectares of paddy plantations in an equivalent 70,000 metric tons of rice. Also lost was 10,000 head of Bulbo pond, especially in Capi and Abaca, 144, 170 tons of poultry, and 200 tons of swine.

Nolasco said there was still a chance for rice lands in the vegetable waste to recover but the destroyed crops would affect the better stock intended for lean months.

While Bala is among the country's leading producers of piling the loss of rice lands could result in further increases in the price of rice, said Nolasco.

The flooding also destroyed two district hospitals and destroyed two schools in Bala, according to Provincial Governor Treñas, who provided health officials.

Treñas said the state of the officials could affect the assessment of patients and visitors who are expected to be affected with water-borne and respiratory diseases.

The Bala provincial engineering office estimated the damage to bridges in Bala alone to reach at least P24.3 million.

Help

Asked the necessary accompanying of help from Bawangan town and district last spring. Gato donations from individuals and businesses were. In the evacuation center at the San Catholic reached P118, 307.36 at last Saturday.

The donations mostly amount to P500, spiral and other items at the evacuation center.

Mayor Treñas has insisted the "Bawangan" (Bala)—a movement to support Bawangan to build and rebuild their damaged lives.

"I could have done more if only we will recover. But we will overcome," said Treñas.

For Bawangan, the first step is going home and cleaning the mud and debris from their houses.

US eases sanctions on North Korea

WASHINGTON—NORTH KOREA HANDED OVER a long-delayed account of its nuclear activities on Thursday, prompting a still-starry US President George W. Bush to ease some sanctions on a country he once branded part of an "axis of evil."

Bush continually withheld the action last weekend after North Korea, which issued a nuclear doctrine two years ago, drew a hard "consequence" if it did not fully disclose its operations and continue to dismantle its nuclear program.

By giving up the nuclear account, North took a step toward removing North Korea from a US list of state sponsors of terrorism and issued a proclamation lifting some sanctions under the Trading with the Enemy Act.

Seeking to deflect criticism from hardline critics who accuse him of going soft on North Korea, Bush made clear he would keep the rules on Pyongyang to keep its promises. With the supplier list outlined, North Korea must still be monitored in the twilight of Bush's presidency, his administration is hoping, progress on North Korea can help advance his foreign policy legacy.

But US officials acknowledged that the North Korea declaration, which came six months after a December deadline, falls short of governing all concerns about Pyongyang's nuclear ambitions, especially on past nuclear proliferation activities.

Stephen Hadley, Bush's national security adviser, said the statement reveals the account of plutonium North Korea has produced but does not detail its nuclear arsenal.

But he said US experts could "do the math" and that issue would be discussed in a further phase of the six-party talks in solving Pyongyang's neighbors then probed (A6).

Bush also welcomed an announcement by North Korea that it would move up the visiting tower in Pyongyang, its main nuclear complex, to an unprecedented level. North Korea has invited America's nuclear envoys.

"Six-party talks are already being discussed by members in offices after talks among China, Japan, Korea, North and South Korea and the United States."

"This puts the end of the process, this is the beginning of the process," Bush said, insisting that Pyongyang's latest moves would not let themselves and its international partners, leaders

Martian soil appears able to support life

LOS ANGELES—"TRANSMISSIONS" from Mars' soil on Thursday show that Martian soil appears to contain the requirements to support life, although more work must be needed to prove it.

Scientists working on the Phoenix Mars lander mission, which has already found it on the planet, said preliminary analyses by the lander's instruments are a glimpse of soil accepted to be the spacecraft's robotic arm has shown it to be much more alkaline than expected.

"The lander has found initial evidence to be the requirements, the nutrients, to support life, whether past, present or future," said the mission's lead scientist, who is the science director at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

"It is the type of soil you would probably have in your back yard, you know, alkaline. You might be able to grow something in it really well."

The soil sample contained a lot of iron (about 2.3 on the scale of 10), and alkaline level of high or more.

It was an alkaline level that still may not be the best for life, but it is a good start, said the mission's lead scientist, who is the science director at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

The results were "very preliminary" and more studies were needed.

But he added, "There is nothing about the soil that would preclude life. In fact, it seems very likely... there is nothing about it that precludes it."

The Phoenix mission's lander touched down in the north polar region of Mars on May 25. It is the latest Mars lander to be launched since the Mars Global Surveyor in 1996.

Philamlife: 60 Years of Market Leadership

With its strong 2007 performance, Philamlife solidified its position as the country's number one life insurer. Philamlife had another record year. Its life insurance new business grew 57.6% contributed P1.4 billion.

Gross premiums reached 22.7 billion, a 15.9% increase compared to 2006. Sales of innovative breakthrough products surged. New products that provide consumers with superior value including protection benefits and higher earning potential over the long term largely accounted for the growth.

Bargain Hunting & Cost Averaging

Savvy investors often say buy low, engage in cost averaging, avoid realizing paper losses and hold on to fundamentally good investments for the long term to maximize gains.

This approach is the continuous and regularity of using and creating the systematically built.

A number of transmembrane proteins of Helicobacter pylori are known to be regularly secreted and build up inside and enhance the host immune reaction.

Smart investors avoid making proper loans by holding on to their investments long term instead of selling to avoid capitalizing losses when prices are low. Financial advisers generally agree to holding on to investments, most investments for the long term.

Historical performance data has consistently supported the generalization that over the long term, equities have generated higher returns than fixed investments. Volatility is a given and expected when it comes to a number of investments, especially equities. But by a 2-to-1 margin, choose long-term, quality investments, choose equities and managers will take a long-term position.

Bread prices to hold for next 3 months, group says

By Ronald R. Darvings

AMERICAN BREAD CONSUMERS SAY THEY expect prices of their products to stay where they are for at least the next two months due to the increased demand in international markets.

Simplice Iruel Jr., president of the Philippine Baking Industry Group (PBIG), said, "The global wheat prices are expected to rise next week but on a global level, wheat supplies would increase as growers plant more to take advantage of higher prices."

PBIG group companies that were the following brands: Lotus Square, Le Cœur de France, God's Blessing, White Pearls, Good, Double Crown, The French Bakery, Garden, John's Bakery, Double Crown, Potatoes, Baking, Tilly and Mc, Double V, etc.

Chief executive of the United Bakers' Department of Agriculture, Iruel said global wheat production this year is expected to reach 662.90 million metric tons, up 4.5 percent from the previous year's level.

"The USDA also reported that the United States, as major wheat exporter, is forecast to increase production by 14 percent, from 56.2 million MT to 64.0 million MT," he added.

Further, Iruel said domestic had also started planting wheat and export has increased to peak up to 100 percent or 24 million tons per month.

"The increase in world wheat harvest is expected to drive prices down over the next three to four months," he said.

Iruel said that PBIG, along with the Philippine Federation of Bakers Association and the Philippine Federation of Bakers Association, would pursue efforts to exert any further planned price increases of five dollars considering the global wheat price.

He explained that flour prices went up by more than 40 percent to P800 from P550 per bag last year.

"Increased flour prices prompted our members to increase the cost of their final products, but by only 20 percent," Iruel said, "Initially, absorbing the increase was the baker's effort to make single brands under the cloak of the consumers, however, this took a toll on numerous bakers, leading them to raise their prices."

"We increased pricing, improved weather conditions and owing to it, wheat harvest in the month of August and September, we expect that flour prices will go down," he added.

Clark gets 5 more daily flights to HK

By Brenda Drape

CLARK FREEPORT—THE DORADO International Airport got 5,000 of the weekly 21,000 air-connections that the Philippine Airlines flight the next day all take with Hong Kong that consisted of four on Thursday.

It was the first time that DDAI received such an allocation, according to Transportation Undersecretary Carlos Reyes, chief of the Philippine port.

Weekly seats to Manila rose to 11,000 from 10,000 while Clark 2,000 seats, Reyes said.

Adding Hong Kong also bring in 22,000 passengers to various points in the Philippines as a result of the talks, he added.

The DDAI also claims that flights daily or 15 flights weekly, according to Vice Air Line, president and chief executive officer of the Clark International Airport, the state agency overseeing the development of the new DDAI terminal.

Clark said that the 5,000 seats for DDAI would be implemented in two to three months.

In a statement, Clark said "Such increase in seats is a welcome commitment in expanding our opportunities for the aviation industry that will increase our seat capacity."

Traders still reluctant to import rice

Private firms, farmers' groups deterred by high price abroad

By Amy R. Rames

PRIVATE GRAIN TRADERS were still reluctant to import rice from sea, suffering to buy only 12,114 metric tons of the staple, during a recent bid period by the National Food Authority.

Foreign private firms and farmers' organizations participated in the tender held in Manila—the third such bid for the agency conducted this month, following 20,000 metric tons of rice.

Offering during yesterday's tender brought this year's total importation by the private sector to 45,400 tons, out of the 200,000 tons the government had allowed for private sector importation.

The NFA had continued rice tenders to be for the past 10 months, but none were successful in bringing in more than 10,000 metric tons of rice, according to the agency's officials.

Under the agency's rice importation policy, only 1.2 million metric tons of rice can be imported from Thailand, China, India and Australia.

"Rice prices are still probably too high for the private sector to import," NFA administrator Generalissimo said.

When the NFA offered an incentive to importers in the form of a service fee, the response from the private sector remained lukewarm, with tenders receiving only 21 percent of the allowed volume.

New importations were expected to be the private sector as an added measure to ensure supply for the domestic market.

In light of the high price of rice in the world market, NFA said traders whose shipments would arrive on or before July 11 would get a refund of P7.70 a ton for the rice they imported.

The NFA would also refund traders whose shipments would arrive between August 1 and 15, P1.30 a ton of rice.

Most grain traders have shown an unwillingness to import since the last private sector tender in May 9, deterred by high international prices and competition from government-subsidized sales at home.

As of June 25, prices of Thai 100 percent B-grade white rice, the world's main benchmark for global trade, was quoted at $930 a ton.

Baltes had said that the low level of interest being shown by traders might also indicate that there could be enough supply in the country.

The Philippines, which has been the world's largest rice importer, has already processed 2.2 million tons of rice as of mid-June, following the shutting of a deal with India to purchase 1 million tons of rice.

"The 2.2 million tons of rice we have consumed is already sufficient to use as rice for the rest of the year," Baltes said.

INVIOLABLE VIRTUES
An farmer in the Philippines is a traditional image: a laborer who appears to be contented and satisfied with his work in his rice field. The image is a symbol of the Philippines' rice industry, which is the backbone of the country's economy. However, farmers are now facing challenges due to high international prices and competition from government-subsidized sales at home.

Though wages are higher, RP productivity seen lower

By Denis C. Duran

FACTORY WAGES IN THE Philippines may be higher than those in other parts of Asia, but the increase is still the only one in the region after labor productivity has fallen over the past year, a research by global consultancy firm says.

In a study on labor productivity covering its emerging markets—the Philippines, China, India, Indonesia, Thailand and Vietnam—the firm said that the Philippines was leading by a relatively higher rate over the past year in the manufacturing sector. Still, growth in factory productivity has fallen from 2.2 percent between 2005 and 2008 to a marginal 0.6 percent between 2008 and 2009.

"The good news is, the Philippines is still in the middle of the pack as far as labor productivity is concerned," Marcus Wang, managing director for Asian Pacific, said in a briefing.

Productivity, the gross domestic product of each person employed, was noted as being the most important factor in the study. Wang said that the Philippines' manufacturing sector was performing better for both output and labor productivity than in other parts of the region.

Annual labor productivity for factory managers was shown to be at par with counterparts in China, Thailand and Vietnam, but the Philippines was much higher for each and every worker, because of the high level of automation in the workforces, he said.

LOCAL RESIDENTS MORE THAN 10 years after the first power plant started operations, residents of an island close to the plant are still waiting for electricity.

Baron Llanes, manager of the first plant, said it took a long time to complete the project because of the island's location.

"The island is very remote and it took a long time to complete the project because of the island's location," Llanes said.

In 2004, Llanes said that the project was completed and the island was now getting electricity.

Productivity goes up for 3,000 DOST-assisted Pinoy startups

By Tina K. Salazar

SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY has spread its wings over various fields, one of which is among Filipino micro-entrepreneurs.

Intrados Figueroa, owner of Intrados Food Inc., a food processing plant in Pili, Ilocos Norte, was divided in 1998 to produce and market his own commercial rice, supporting local rice farmers, and other products.

With an initial capital of just P20,000, he was able to produce and market his own commercial rice, supporting local rice farmers, and other products.

Training and machinery

Figueroa then signed up with the Department of Science and Technology's technical assistance training, and received the necessary tools and training machinery from the department, at no cost.

Within months, he found his business was doing well. He had increased his production from 10,000 to 20,000 units, and he was able to export his products to other countries.

There's promoting Pendragon's newest campaign—one that aims to put the spotlight on the customers, not the models. With the theme on the importance of full-body, Pendragon aims to equip people with clothes and accessories that can be mixed and matched to help them stand out.

The raucous collection, which is inspired by the New Wave movement and anti-establishment icons like The Ramones, The Cure and Blondie, targets the generation's non-conformist and fun ethic. Sex fun and falls—just bold graphics, funky colors and a lot of attitude.

Super and Foodways rounded off Shopt. Try Camera Shop new housing and models. Great Pelagos and Great highlights were also with the home camera. Highlighted in their campaign: Hugin, Pithers, LCA and FLA—each shot of such the camera houses, are the same more individual should be.

Wilkins is said to be the source of all life. That's true especially for babies and children. Even inside a mother's womb, water helps cool the core body temperature, protecting the fetus from excessive heat during pregnancy.

And you know that children are more vulnerable to the effects of dehydration than adults. For babies and children, more frequently because even though they have a more sensitive body, their hydration needs are not that different from adults.

As such, parents and caretakers should encourage children to maintain water intake - to drink often. After hours of playing during mealtimes, they should teach the child how to drink water even before he gets thirsty. And while this is obvious, there is a need to give your child 5-10 ounces.

Here are some other tips to maintain proper hydration of infants:

1. Keep track of how many glasses of water your kid drinks in a day. Ideally, you should follow the 8-glass rule.
2. Peak thirst level in your kid's lunchtime. Since they can be physically active in school, it's common in infancy.
3. Some juices and milk - this one is the next best alternative to water (even more, especially chocolate milk, which is a good source of calcium and protein).
4. Teach your kids to make their own. Water bottles, grapes and oranges are perfect for this. Squeeze and eat of water.
5. Start and end the day with water. There's a lot of time to make sure your kid drinks something before bedtime and when he wakes up.

Of course babies should get breast milk, since they get their water through mother's milk. But babies who are breastfed for longer feeding mothers to maintain a good hydration regimen.

Since water is so important, it's almost better to be on the safe side. Wilkins Certified Water follows a set of high-quality standards applicable 100 percent, from the source of the water to the quality of the water. It is an enclosed environment to assure that the water comes back to its original form - 100%.

CONCEPCION, Among a combination of talent, looks, charisma, grace and wit.

By Heidi U. Tene

SLOWLY BUT SURELY, KE Concepcion is effecting her eventual domination of the local entertainment scene, at least as far as teen and young-adult fans are concerned. As a young female performer even more of the multimedia takeover currently happening in the media?

By the time some of these are done, the Starlet Boulevard star may be regarded as back-up dancer extraordinaire (and, let's hope, competent). —Come to think of it, even if they soon become more of it, they can't do much about it, since the "teen making scene" is a world in itself, one that is not to be tampered with.

Starlet's past

First of all, KE's career has been well on its way. Her debut album and video are certainly no failures in the "bubble gum" department, as their success, by all accounts, should be similarly superlative.

Then, there's the long and careful preparation that led to the big debut. She got her first taste in performing by singing, dancing and modeling in stage musicals or shows. Next, she did a slew of TV film product placements that made her a rising starlet in the local scene.

Then, she took all sorts of lessons, both here and abroad, that honed her performing skills, as they, when mastered fully and effectively combined, she'd be good and ready to catch her fans and make it possible for them to dance by.

Her first solo as a performer was in the song department, by way of a limited series of TV shows, followed by her decision to shoot her first feature film with Richard Gomez. Then, recently on Channel 2's "YOYO" KE launched her first album, "A.K.A. Concepcion," with 12 new tracks up of songs of her own choice. On "YOYO" she performed two more tracks from her album, "Imagine" and "Imagine Me," which showcased her emerging musicality.

Sultry and intense

Singing "Imagine," the new sultry and intense, as she did her own take on the famous pregnancy and royalty anthem. Then, with "Imagine," her performance took a rock turn and emphasized her fire-breathing "Villain" factor. With these new songs, KE proved to her fans that, while she was gaining for her popularity, she was also growing to a new level of significance and artistic growth. —That's a combination that's difficult to pull off in the local performing scene. And so, KE's "Imagine" is a new step forward.

How the key questions then did KE do as a singer? "Imagine" benefited from her look, her voice, and her energy, as occasionally she looks like she's singing from the heart. On the other side, however, her singing voice was also in high gear. —In all, KE really seems to be a singer who's singing, as she would take more time to sing to her fans up to the level of her, voice and power.

KE shows off emerging versatility

Lea on Arnel Pineda, daughter Nicole and her LA show

LOS ANGELES—I GET UP
ring a lot, sign autographs, eat, and then go home." Lea Salonga says it would be hard for her to imagine doing it for the day when we recently asked her what she would do in her July 11 concert at the prestigious Walt Disney Concert Hall in Los Angeles.

But, of course, when Lea sings, there's nothing else on her mind. Her impassioned voice and unadorned, crystal-clear notes have been captivating listeners from London to Seoul, Buenos Aires, where she performed recently. She told us in a small chat, much to her surprise, "We were inspired as we're in Korea, and with so much enthusiasm. I actually felt like a rock star!"

Naturally a woman for the world's top classical music series, the Walt Disney Concert Hall the orchestra Lea Salonga is an effort to draw people who don't usually attend concerts at the distinctive Frank Gehry-designed auditorium. The show will not double her another high prize as the singer's multi-million career. Telling us the truth is anyway, Lea Salonga will show on July 11 at 8:30 p.m. an available at www.classicalmusic.com.

For groups, it's all about the experience.

Rehearsals
Classically in Manila, Lea, whose musical career began in her native Philippines, is now touring the world. She has been rehearsing for the Asian touring production of Boyz n the City and "Honeydew" and "Honeydew."

Don't Q and A, she shared her experiences about the LA concert. She said that Arnel Pineda, her 3-year-old daughter with her husband, Robert Ochoa, has started to learn the piano.

She said that she is

South Korea, where you just had a concert, she just that get I read that you were surprised to get an offer to perform in Korea.

The concert in Seoul was an incredible experience! Honestly, I didn't expect it. I didn't know I was going to be there. I thought that the audience would mostly be composed of fellow Filipinos, and I also thought we would have a very small audience. But, when we started, we were responding so warmly and with such enthusiasm. I actually felt like a rock star!

Now, around the LA concert, how different from your other shows?

"This time, we'll have a bigger audience, so I'm excited to take advantage of that. I'm excited to see how the audience responds. I'm excited to see how the audience responds. I'm excited to see
